Town council receives mixed report card

Administration gives both high and low marks for strategic plan progress

BY JOHNNIE
 BACHUSKY
 Review Staff

If town council members were students facing their parents they would likely receive a nice pat on the head but no raise in their allowance.

Council members received their first report card on June 12 at the Committee of the Whole Meeting on how they were doing in completing the tasks outlined in the 2010-2013 Strategic Plan. And the marks were mixed.

Roy Brown, the town's chief administrative officer, delivered administration's assessment. It was the first report card given by administration for the strategic plan, which is being driven by a vision of moving the town progressively into the future by enhancing its community and quality of life while respecting the municipality's rich history.

The CAO gave council an A grade for corporate accountability and a B+ for its communications with community partners.

"Council has done a very good job," said Brown of council's corporate accountability performance.

However, Brown was less impressed with council's performance on encouraging economic development and fiscal accountability, and the tasks assigned for building the community. In both areas he gave a C- mark.

"There are a lot of things that are incomplete," said Brown.

In the area of encouraging economic development, he noted council has not finished its evaluation of the town's fiscal position, including an analysis of the tax base, user fees, government transfers and levies. He also noted a proposed Transportation Master Plan was incomplete.

MAYOR BRIAN WITTAL

In the Building Community area, Brown said several areas were incomplete, including enhancement of the town's cemetery, parks and open spaces, redevelopment of lands adjoining the railway tracks along 19th and 20th streets, reconstruction of the south portion of 20th Street to 15th Avenue with heritage lighting standards and sidewalk enhancements, and the development and implementation of a Come Home campaign that focuses on encouraging people to return to the community.

Although Brown outlined several shortcomings, Mayor Brian Wittal said he felt the overall assessment was fair.

"With the Cs, there are a lot of things we are working on. If I was back at school I would argue that grade with the teacher a little bit, thinking we are doing better than that," said Wittal. "We are not that far away from getting to the end of a lot of these things. Maybe we should be a little higher."

Nevertheless, the mayor said administration's report card will inspire council to "push" on the areas that need work, with a goal of earning an A or better score in future report cards.

He told council that some things are better left for the far future, such as the Transportation Master Plan. Wittal said the town has higher priorities, such as the ongoing development of Shantz Crossing.

"I think it should go on the shelf," Wittal said of the transportation plan. "I don't think right now that visioning for a 25-year plan, which roads are going to be our primary and secondary, is not right now as important to spend time and money for our staff as it is for Shantz, Bethany Care or these other projects that are going to take off."

Meanwhile the next administrative report card is expected to be presented in September. Wittal said at that time council will have a better idea on what needs to be pushed forward into the new year.

"They could have budget implications in order to complete some of these things," said the mayor. "If we decide not to do that (Transportation Master Plan) then we don't have to worry about budgeting for it and we can take that off the list and maybe leave it to the new council in deciding whether to implement that."

Town looks to improve museum's long-term fortunes

Frankie Kelly, president of the Didsbury and District Historical Society, wants the town to support its request for a paid museum director.

BY JOHNNIE
BACHUSKY
Review Staff

The town is expected this month to initiate moves to take over ownership of the Didsbury Museum and begin the process of hiring a paid director to steer the venerable institution forward into the future.

On April 10, volunteers from the Didsbury and District Historical Society, which oversees operations at the museum, went before the town's Committee of the Whole Meeting and presented a proposal for the town to consider a long-term funding commitment of $60,000 annually to cover the cost of employing a full-time museum director and the annual cost of utilities.

The institution, located in the historic two-storey red brick and sandstone school building, was built in 1907 and has been the home of the Didsbury

FRANKIE KELLY

Museum since 1989. It was designated a historic building by the province in the summer of 1997. The society acquired the building in 2006 under a deal that if it ceased to be a museum the Chinook's Edge School Division had the legal right to take it back.

Society president Frankie Kelly said there is an "absolute essential" urgency behind the April 10 request as at least half of the board members are now seniors and a progressive plan is needed for the long-term viability of the museum.

"What has kept it going is that nobody is paid. We are all volunteers who give our heart and soul," said Kelly. "We are now all aging. We are seniors. Time doesn't stand still."

Although Kelly praised town council for its continued support she added she doubts it has any money at this time to support a paid museum director.

However, Mayor Brian Wittal said it is important the town now find money somewhere to at least begin the process of having a paid director, adding it could be done if the town proceeds concurrently with its long-standing plan to take over ownership of the historical structure.

"I think it is feasible," said Wittal of the society's paid manager proposal, adding the Chinook's Edge School Division is supporting the town's desire to take over ownership of the building. "The town has to get more involved and preserve it. We have to do that. This (new museum manager) has to be seriously discussed and built into the future."

He said it is possible a firm plan could be in place by the end of the summer to finally take over ownership of the historic building and provide the society with at least some start-up money to hire a paid manager.

Wittal said one option could be to start the position as part-time and increase those hours as the town receives additional revenues. He added by taking over ownership of the building and its accompanying costs some of the museum's current fundraising and grant monies now used for operations could then be put towards the salary of a new paid director.

Kelly said the society now depends on casino monies, and some provincial and county grant funds to keep the doors open on Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday afternoons. The town provides in-kind services free of charge and does not hold the society responsible for taxes or costs for water and sewage.

She said she has considered approaching an oil company to sponsor the museum.

Kelly added that any new money that could be found at the corporate level would go towards hiring a paid director, even if the position began only as part time.

In the society's presentation to the Committee of the Whole Meeting in April, council members were told a paid full-time museum director would allow for increased public access as the institution would have the ability to add more hours of operation. The new director would also be tasked to implement new strategies for communication, fundraising, and long-term strategic goals, including forming new partnerships.

Residents clean park to help public works crew

Residents clean up neglected green space in Deer Ridge.

BY JOHNNIE BACHUSKY
Review Staff

Residents have stepped up to clean up a neglected strip of green space in the town's Deer Ridge neighbourhood.

Last week, a half dozen residents, many of them seniors, took it upon themselves to give the town's resource-stretched public works department a hand to beautify the green space, known as Alfred Park, a green space of less than one acre in size at the intersection of 12 Street and 23 Avenue.

The residents fixed up neglected flower beds in the park's rock gardens, pulled out dandelions and trimmed trees.

The park has also been mowed.

"They took the initiative because they wanted to support the parks' crew," said Bob Wright, a longtime volunteer member of the Didsbury Fire Department who lives near the park. "The town crews get picked on all the time but they have limited resources."

"For quite a few years the developers looked after it," added Wright, noting the green space had turned in recent years to an eyesore. "It seems to be one of the last ones the parks department was looking at."

In recent years trees in the green space had died. Wright noted, however, parks crews did replace them this spring with new trees.

Meanwhile, Mike Phillips, the town's manager of public works, said Alfred Park's restoration was on his department's agenda and his staff fully intended to get caught up with its cleanup.

"We had hoped to get at it by the end of the month or in the beginning of July but there has been a lot of wet weather," said Phillips, whose department of eight full-time staff members is tasked this year to maintain 50 acres of green space. "Residents took it upon themselves to fix things up and I commend them for that."

Phillips said the effort by residents is especially appreciated as it saves the town time and money. He said it is hoped the initiative will inspire other citizens to take the same action or even formally "adopt" a park to ensure it is always regularly maintained.

"It sure helps our parks crew out," said Phillips. "We are more than happy to see this happen."

New alcohol driving rule must be closely monitored

While most, if not all, law-abiding Albertans are probably in favour of more being done to reduce drunk driving in the province – and the injuries and deaths that go along with it – whether new alcohol limits coming into effect September 1 are the answer remains anyone's guess.

DAN SINGLETON

Yet with Alberta's roads and highways continuing to be littered with smashed vehicle and broken lives thanks to impaired drivers, something obviously needs to be done.

Introduced just before the last provincial election, the new limits increase administrative suspensions and vehicle seizure times for anyone caught driving with a blood alcohol level greater than 0.05.

Under the legislation, a first offence can result in a three-day licence suspension; a second offence, a 15-day licence suspension, a seven-day vehicle seizure and a mandatory 'planning ahead' course; and a third offence, a 30-day licence suspension, a seven-day vehicle seizure and a mandatory 'impact' course.

Premier Redford has said the new rules could help reduce crashes caused by drivers being made less attentive by the presence of alcohol in their blood.

She also says Alberta is not breaking new ground with the new rule, noting that all other provinces, except Quebec, already impose some sanctions on drivers with blood alcohol levels greater than 0.05 mg per cent.

The Wildrose Opposition has been calling for the new legislation to be scrapped, saying targeting drivers with blood alcohol levels less than 0.08 mg per cent (the Criminal Code legal limit) won't save lives.

"We need to take serious action on drunk driving to protect Alberta families, not waste time and resources on a law that won't work," says Wildrose transportation critic Shayne Saskiw.

Hiring more RCMP officers and increasing funding for checkpoints would be a much better way of keeping drunks off the road, he says.

Bar owners says imposing the 0.05 limit will deter customers from visiting their establishments, causing a marked decline in the economic health of the hospitality industry as a result.

With more than 8,500 people injured in alcohol-related motor vehicle accidents in Alberta since 2006 – and more than 90 killed in such crashes last year alone – something obviously needs to be done to stop the carnage.

Whether this new 0.05 rule is the answer remains to be seen.

With less than three months now left before the new rule comes into effect, the chances of the legislation being stopped now are certainly remote.

Nevertheless, once it comes into effect, this new rule should be very closely monitored to see if it does, in fact, have a positive impact. And if it proves ineffective in reducing crashes, it should be scrapped without delay.

The blues with Captain Beefheart and Lyle

Summertime Blues was written and released by rock 'n' roll pioneer Eddie Cochran in 1958. But it was The Who, with their smash and crash rhythms sounding like a herd of a 1,000 rampaging rhinoceroses, that made this song famous.

It is my perfect tune for this summer as I prepare for my annual backroad expedition to faraway locales in search of ghosts, the kind for forgotten communities.

The road is also where I go back in time to renew pleasures from my youth. Summertime Blues will kick things off. What will follow at some point, but far too belatedly, is Captain Beefheart's Trout Mask Replica.

I have never listened to Trout Mask Replica, an influential album from 1969 that was celebrated by the artsy types with a fondness for the blues, avant-garde, and the truly weird.

Lyle Lytle, my best teenage friend in Ottawa during the mid and late 70s, loved the blues, and most artsy stuff outside the norm. He thought Captain Beefheart was a genius. He tried to introduce me to Trout Mask Replica, but as soon as I saw the cover, a too weird composition of a fish head man wearing a top hat, it was time to run.

He countered the good captain was the real deal of the times. And he growled just like the legendary Howlin' Wolf, Lyle exclaimed.

Right around this time the Sex Pistols were the big deal in rock music. The foul mouthed British quartet led the new punk rock craze. Lyle completely dismissed it. He was an artist. It was his mission to move towards those who were bold and pushing past traditional boundaries.

Outside music, Lyle and I did our own road journeys together. For him, the road meant opportunities not noticed by most but savoured by those embracing the strange and weird.

However, one time I did get the best of him for sensing the strange. In the spring of 1978 we travelled on the cheap to New York City. We walked a lot of avenues and witnessed many odd things. We wound up staying at the Hotel Chelsea, a famous establishment that housed many of the world's great artists, including Andy Warhol, Mark Twain, Arthur Miller, Jim Morrison, Dylan Thomas and Sid Vicious, the late Sex Pistols bass player. It was my idea at the time. Lyle let on it was not a big deal.

But six months later when news hit that Vicious' girlfriend was killed at the Hotel Chelsea, possibly in the same room we stayed in, a smile crossed Lyle's face. For the first and only time, there was a reversal of sorts in our friendship. It was I who had first sensed the weird edge of the world.

Two weeks ago a friend sent me a facebook message that Lyle had passed away. He was 56. It has been almost 25 years since we talked. Time had taken us on different paths. I would be dishonouring my friendship with Lyle by going on and on with mushy and utterly banal assertions about what a great guy he was. I will only say that I loved him, and leave it at that.

But Trout Mask Replica awaits. The road calls. A bit of research convinces me that Orange Claw Hammer should lead things off.

Uh thick cloud caught up piper clubs tail

The match struck blue on uh railroad rail

The old puff horse was just pullin' thru

'n uh man wore uh peg leg forever

I'm on the bum where the hoboos run

Hopefully, Lyle will smile and approve.

Police issue scam alert

BY JOHNNIE
BACHUSKY
Review Staff

Didsbury RCMP is warning residents to be vigilant against being conned by smooth-talking scam artists posing as legitimate household contractors.

Recent incidents in and around town had police initially concerned the so-called 'Irish Pavers' had made a return to the area, said Didsbury RCMP Cpl. Warren Wright.

He said in the past four years individuals, who police would later give the moniker 'Irish Pavers', have been coming to the area peddling paving services to rural residents.

Wright said they would offer residents extra asphalt for paving at their homes. A price would be negotiated, and if the residents agreed, trucks would later show at their homes. He said cash would be demanded by the contractors upfront.

The RCMP officer said some work would be done but the workers ultimately left before the job was completed, leaving homeowners with only a half-finished job to deal with themselves.

"In the past years Mountain View County residents have been taken for hundreds of thousands of dollars in this type of situation," said Wright. "The last time the Irish Pavers were in this area was last summer. They move from Edmonton to Lethbridge."

"The Irish Pavers are using labourers that are illegal immigrants and immigration officials are very interested in these people to determine if they are legal and whether they should work in this country," he added.

Wright said the situation left police in a "grey line" as far as whether the cases merited an investigation as each job was negotiated with a verbal agreement.

"It is open to interpretation," said Wright. "The guy did part of the driveway but not the way they (residents) wanted. This has been going on for years."

He said the Didsbury RCMP detachment received "numerous" calls earlier this month about a company offering paving services.

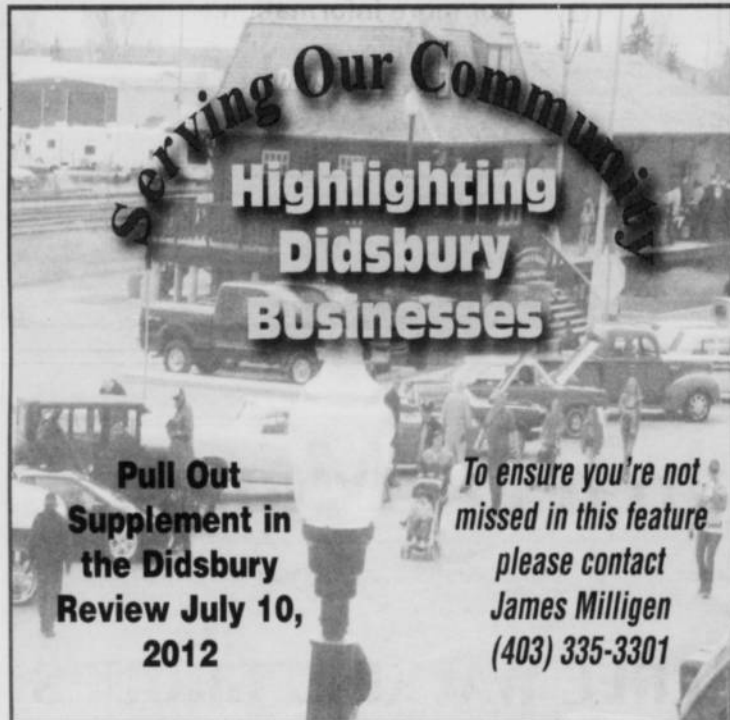

Wright said RCMP spoke with a contractor who assured police he provided written quotes and contracts to potential clients and that he was only paid by cheque.

"There is no link established between this contractor and the Irish Pavers," said Wright.

However, Didsbury RCMP is urging town and area residents to be on guard against potential paving con artists and to "exercise due diligence to protect themselves."

"I want to remind people to ask for a business licence, provincial accreditation and a written contract so that expectations are clear," said Wright. "And never pay in cash."

Any town or area residents that encounter any suspicious people offering contracts for household work can contact Didsbury RCMP at 403-335-3382.

Field hockey Wildcats take gold in Calgary

Photo submitted
Players and coaches of Didsbury's gold-medal winning Team Wildcats. They triumphed at the annual Calgary Junior Field Hockey Tournament on June 9. Although the regular season is officially over for the players, up to 10 may be chosen to play for the Alberta Select Team at the Western Prairie Field Hockey Tournament in Edmonton on July 14 and 15.

It was a reversal of fortunes for Westglen School's field hockey teams at a major tournament this month in Calgary.

The school entered two co-ed teams of Grade 5 and 6 students - Team Wildcats and Team Westglen - at the annual University of Calgary Junior Field Hockey Tournament on June 9. Last year, Team Westglen placed second at the Calgary tournament.

Earlier in the month, Team Westglen took first place at the school's host tournament while Team Wildcats finished third.

But fortunes changed in Calgary. Team Westglen had to settle for fifth place in Calgary while Team Wildcats won its final game to claim gold at the eight-team tournament, a close 1 - 0 score over the Calgary Junior team. Jaedan Miller scored the gold medal winning goal for Team Wildcats.

"I was thrilled with the teams' performance," said co-coach Jenny Johnson, past coach for five seasons at Didsbury High School. "Both teams demonstrated great effort and showed improvement in both skills and tactics.

"It was a very nice team to coach," she added of the players from both squads. "I'm grateful for the parents for their support."

She said the season is now over for the young players but 10 of them were chosen to go to the Alberta Select Team Trials on June 10.

Johnson said all eight local boys made the Alberta team while two girls are still competing at the trials.

The provincial team for players under 14 will compete at the Western Prairie Field Hockey Tournament in Edmonton on July 14 and 15.

Town hitting parade season with new float

BY JOHNNIE BACHUSKY
Review Staff

As preparations move into high gear for the annual parades in towns throughout Mountain View County, Didsbury is serving notice it's ready to be front and centre with a headlining attraction.

The town is now busy putting together its first float in five years.

At the June 12 Committee of the Whole Meeting, council members were told to get ready to attend the annual June 23 parade in Sundre, the Carstairs' Beef and Barley Days on July 21, Bowden Daze on July 28, Didsbury's annual parade on Aug. 18 and Cremona's Canada Day parade on July 1.

"If your association would like to partake in any fashion with a float, walking, riding a bike, we would be very happy to have you join us in this exciting event," said Angie Rose, 2012 parade organizer in a letter to Didsbury Mayor Brian Wittal.

During the June 12 meeting, Wittal and town councillors divided up summer parade assignments. The mayor said this year would be special as the town is now busy preparing its new float.

"It has been four or five years since we had a float in a parade. The last one we had was an old train float. We have a committee of both council members and staff who wanted to do something," said Wittal. "They have designed and built this float that is well beyond their expectations when they originally started all this planning. We wanted to utilize that, not only for our parade but others in the region."

However, Wittal was not prepared to offer any details at this time what the new float will look like, nor its theme.

"It involves the heritage of Didsbury," he said with a smile. "When it is unveiled in Sundre everybody will see exactly what it is all about."

Murray Wackett

July 1, 1945 - June 11, 2011

He never looked for praises
He was never one to boast
He just went on quietly working
For those he loved the most
His dreams were seldom spoken
His wants were very few
And most of the time his worries
Would go unspoken too
He was there ... A firm foundation
Through all our storms of life
A sturdy hand to hold onto
In times of stress and strife
A true friend we could turn to
When times were good and bad
Our single greatest blessing
The man that we called Dad, Papa & Murr
